Research Interests

My work examines issues related to diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) at the intersection of two major shifts occurring in the U.S. workforce: (1) the increasing amount of racial diversity in the workforce and (2) the future of work. Often using an intersectional lens, I suggest that these changes will challenge many assumptions about the nature of DEI in organizations—including barriers to women’s career advancement, experiences of racial discrimination, and organizations’ own responses to their changing environments—both at the individual and organizational level.
